The Restaurateur Tells Investigators of Policeman Callahan's Persecution.

The Police Investigating Committee re sumed work this morning at its old stand in Part III. of the Su, erior Court. As usual Senator Bradley made his appear-

"Finally he caught me after smashing two or three glasses, handcunfed me and took me to the station, where he made three charges against me—of robbing a man of $150, selling liquor without a license, and assault.

"The Captain discharged me after hearing my story, and I made a com-complaint," asked Mr. Moss.

"No, sir."
Mr. Moss said he had subpoenaed Callahan, but that he had failed to respond. He had also complained to the Captain of the Charles street station, but apparently there was no effort being made to secure obedience to the mandates of the Committee.

Senator Bradley thought that this was Senator Bradley thought that this was only a case of an individual breach of discipline, and did not show that there was any blackmail or corruption. Mr. Moss, however, said that there were many other charges against Callahan, and he proposed to bring them out. Senator O'Connor said that the Committee had heard enough of individual cases and that it was time that they should go up higher.

Senators Want to "Go Up Higher. "It is the Police Commissioners we wan to get at." said Senator O'Connor, "and there seems to be a general feeling that the time has come when we should follow up the evidence which has already been brought out."

Mr. Moss replied that all that would be attended to in good time. The Commissioners were now being notified, he said, of the crimes that were being committed by members of the force, and when they were put upon the stand they would be kept there until they answered the entire indictment.

"That is what we want," put it Chairman Lexow. "I should like to ask some of the Commissioners how it is that they have allowed those men to remain on the force after they have been repeatedly convicted of crimes and brutalities. I think that the public demands that we should extend our investigation to the higher officials of the Department, and I want to call the attention of the Committee's counse the Department, and I want to call the attention of the Committee's counsel to this fact right here, because this sentiment seems to be growing more strong every day.

Mr. Moss said in reply that the course

The witness said that the next day Hunsey came down to his cell and tried to frighten him by telling him he was in a bad fix, and might be sent away for a good many years. While Hussey was taking him down to his cell he told Frankel he ought to send for Charlie Smith.

"I had heard of Charlie Smith," said Frankel, "and that he often helped poor people, so the next morning I told Hussey to go and get Charlie Smith. I saw Smith in court, and after my case had come up before Justice Koch, I saw Charlie Smith go up behind the deak and whisper to the Judge. He put me under $1,000 bail.

"I saw Smith afterwards and asked him if he wouldn't go on my bond, as it was a put up job on me, and he said he could not afford to go on the bond of a man charged with robbery, and walked away."

As the sual Senator Bradley made his appearance as the advance guard, and while waiting for his colleagues to arrive he had a good deal to say of the possibility of a similar investigation into the workings of the Brooklyn Police Department. Senator Bradley is fully convinced that such an inquiry is demanded by the necessities of the case, and that it would disclose just as startling a condition of affairs as that which has been brought out by Mr. Goff in New York City. Mr. Moss called as the first witness James Smith, who keeps a restaurant at 8 Greenwich avenue. He told a harrowing tale of oppression at the hands of Policeman Callahan, of the Charles street station.

About a week ago, he said, Callahan came into his restaurant under the influence of liquor. He had two live chickens in his hand, and sitting down at a table called loudy for a knife.
